Good afternoon!

Just got a really nice email from Kornheiser and wanted to share it with you - hi, marv.

i'm sure you've had plenty of people tell you what a good week this must have been for the boss. but what he did in charleston--not just the eulogy, but when he started singing "amazing grace"--was amazing. it's probably bad to think of a sad occasion like that and call it a man's finest public hour. but that moment, that one brilliant, gutsy, risky moment, that was a showstopper. that's why you elect someone president: so he can have moments like that, so he can be the man you wish you could be.

i'm distraught that the purple line was approved.

so let's play columbia before that train goes rolling through.

cheers, tony

Hope you're having a relaxing day.
