Sent: Wed, 01 Dec 2010 02:36:23 -0500
From: [redacted] P6/b(6)
To: 3 <first.lady@whitehouse.gov>, pasok@pasok.gr
Subject: facts of incompetence

A Conspiracy of Incompetence

Forget the conspiracy theories. Consider the facts of incompetence.

After a decade of new defense subdivisions and billions of dollars in security spending, we are no closer in uncovering the true face of al-Qaida (may its name be blotted out). For the duration of a ten-year chase, the only bit of information we now have is that the United States "came close" to taking out al Qaida's second-in-command, doctor Ayman al-Zawahiri.

The first-in-command doesn't even matter any longer. General Sir David Richards, the head of Britain's Armed Forces has warned the West will never defeat al Qaida. How does he know? A conspiracy of incompetence. Shoot anything that moves. We still can't make out whom the enemy actually is.

"Nobody in al-Qaida is living in a cave," an official recently said, disputing a notion some have believed. Some observers say Osama bin Laden was killed many years ago. Others think he is "protected by locals" with his kidney dialysis "doctor" against the largest (and most incompetent) military pursuit in the world. An expert on digital image forensics said that a fake video of bin Laden contained many visual and audio splices, and that all of the modifications were of very low quality.

Defense Secretary Robert Gates told reporters that the U.S. has not had any good intelligence on the whereabouts of Osama bin Laden in "years." Attorney General Eric Holder told Congress that Osama bin Laden would never face trial in the United States because he will not be captured alive. How does he know?

Today, government officials evidently don't worry about overcoming the tyrants of 9/11. They care more about capturing copycat terrorists that might disturb New World Order trade events. And they care about implementing tax-paid protection schemes against a broad range of perceived copycat terrorists. A conspiracy of incompetence. Who profited mainly from the 9/11 decade of religious terrorism? More than Muslim nations combined. Forget the conspiracy theories. Consider the facts.

"Just in terms of allocation of time resources, religion is not very efficient. There's a lot more I could be doing on a Sunday morning." - Bill Gates