Departure.

POTUS emerged from Diplomatic Room door at 3:33 p.m. wearing a short dark jacket against the 24 degree cold in Washington.

A light coat of snow dusted the pool and observers as Marine One lifted off at 3:38 p.m. Obama is headed to Florida for a wedding. The only aide identified by pooler was Brian Mosteller, who was carrying a very large stack of folders and binders.

Motorcade arrived back at Jacksonville International Airport at 7:56pm.

POTUS boarded Air Force One before pool arrived at the plane.

We are rolling shortly and headed back to Joint Base Andrews.

Air Force One touched down at Joint Base Andrews at 9:23 pm.

POTUS emerged at 9:35, descended the steps, and headed quickly to Marine One, which lifted off at 9:41pm.

Handing off to in-town pool. Goodnight and enjoy the rest of the weekend, everyone.

Arrival.

Marine One touched down at 9:53 p.m., in darkness and bitterly cold temperatures.

It is 20 degrees outside in Washington.

After a wave and a brisk walk through the Diplomatic Room doors, Obama is home for the night.

Following was Katie Waldo, trip coordinator at the WH, carrying a large stack of binders. A travel/photo lid was called at 10:01 p.m.

This is my last pool report of the Obama administration and it has been a pleasure. Good night all!

EMBARGOED UNTIL 6:00AM EDT, SATURDAY, January 7, 2017

WEEKLY ADDRESS: President Obama's Farewell Address to the Nation

WASHINGTON, DC — In this week's address, President Obama discussed his upcoming farewell address to the nation. In 1796, as George Washington set the precedent for a peaceful, democratic transfer of power, he also set a precedent by penning a farewell address to the American people. And over the 220 years since, many American presidents have followed his lead. Next week, the President will return to his hometown of Chicago to say a grateful farewell to the nation. This will mark the first time that a President has returned to his hometown to deliver such a speech. The President has said that the running thread through his career has been the notion that when ordinary people get involved, get engaged and come together, things change for the better. This belief is at the heart of the American experiment in self-government – and it gives purpose to new generations. Through his address, the President will thank his supporters, celebrate the ways we have changed this country for the better these past eight years, and offer his vision on where we all go from here. The President will deliver his farewell address at 9:00 PM EST on Tuesday, January 10, at McCormick Place in Chicago, Illinois. To tune in on Tuesday, visit WhiteHouse.gov/live.

The audio of the address and video of the address will be available online at www.whitehouse.gov at 6:00AM EDT, January 7, 2017.

Remarks of President Barack Obama as Prepared for Delivery
Weekly Address
The White House
January 7, 2017

Since the days of George Washington, presidents have delivered some form of final message while in office – a farewell address to the American people.

On Tuesday night, in Chicago, I'll deliver mine. I chose Chicago not only because it's my hometown – where I met my wife and we started a family – but also because it's really where my career in public service began.

The running thread through my career has been the notion that when ordinary people get involved, get engaged, and come together in collective effort, things change for the better.

That's the belief at the heart of this precious American experiment in self-government. It's what gives work and purpose to each new generation.

It's easy to lose sight of that truth in the day-to-day back-and-forth of Washington and our minute-to-minute news cycles. But remember that America is a story told over a longer time horizon, in fits and starts, punctuated at times by hardship, but ultimately written by generations of citizens who've somehow worked together, without fanfare, to form a more perfect union.

Over the past eight years, we've added our own new chapter to that story.

Together, we've turned an economy that was shrinking and losing jobs into one that's growing and creating jobs, with poverty falling, incomes rising, and wages that have jumped faster over the past few years than at any time in the past four decades.

Together, we've achieved what eluded politicians of both parties for a century - we've moved 20 million more Americans from uninsured to insured, ended the days of discrimination against the up to half of Americans who have a preexisting condition, and secured new rights and protections for everybody with health insurance.

Together, we've brought home most of our brave troops from Iraq and Afghanistan, and took bin Laden and thousands of other terrorists off the battlefield for good. We've opened a new chapter with the people of Cuba, shut down Iran's nuclear weapons program without firing a single shot, and brought the world together around a climate agreement that could save this planet for future generations.

By these measures and many more, we have made America a better, stronger place for the generations that follow ours. We've run our leg in our long journey of progress, knowing that our work is and will always be unfinished. That's the imperative of citizenship - the idea that with hard work, people who love their country can change it. That will be the focus of my farewell to you this Tuesday - and I hope you'll tune in. Thanks, and have a great weekend.
