2016 WORLD SERIES CHAMPIONSHIP VISIT – CHICAGO CUBS

DATE: January 16, 2017
LOCATION: State Dining Room, East Room
TIME: 1:00 – 1:35 PM
From: Deesha Dyer, Elizabeth Pan, and Alex Yudelson

I. PURPOSE

YOU will congratulate the 2016 World Series Champions, the Chicago Cubs. On November 2, the Cubs clinched their first World Series title in 108 years after winning Game 7 against the Cleveland Indians by a score of 8-7 in extra innings.

Led by Manager Joe Maddon, the Cubs finished the 2016 regular season with a 103-58 record – the best in Major League Baseball. The Cubs defeated the San Francisco Giants 3-1 in the National League Division Series. They went on to defeat the Los Angeles Dodgers 4-2 in the National League Conference Series to advance to the World Series.

This was the first World Series title for the Chicago Cubs since 1908. YOU called to congratulate Cubs manager Joe Maddon from Air Force One, and the City of Chicago estimated that close to five million people attended their victory parade. Mayor Rahm Emanuel will be in attendance.

II. PARTICIPANTS

- The First Lady (for greet)
- Chicago Cubs team members and their guests
- Joe Maddon, Manager
- The Ricketts Family, Team Owners
 - Tom Ricketts
 - Laura Ricketts
 - Todd Ricketts
- Theo Epstein, President of Baseball Operations
- Jed Hoyer, General Manager
- Stakeholders invited by OPE, IGA, and CAB
- Members of Congress (See attached supplement.)

III. PRESS PLAN

CLOSED Press for greet. OPEN Press for remarks. WH Videographer will cover.

IV. SEQUENCE OF EVENTS

- YOU and the First Lady move to the State Dining Room and greet the Chicago Cubs team members, coaches, spouses, and leadership. (NOTE: Candid photos are taken of YOU.)
- YOU stand in the doorway to the State Dining Room and shake hands with participants as they file down the cross hall to the risers in the East Room.
- YOU bid farewell to the First Lady.
- YOU and Tom, Laura, and Todd Ricketts move to the Green Room.
- VOG announces YOU and the Ricketts family to stage.
- YOU proceed to the podium and give brief remarks.
- Anthony Rizzo (first baseman, #44) announces the team gift – a Cubs jersey.
- WHCA strikes the podium.
- YOU move to center stage in front of the risers and pose for a group photo.
- YOU depart.

V. REMARKS

Provided under separate cover by Speechwriting.

VI. ATTACHMENTS

- A. Select Participant Biographies
- B. Congressional Supplement

SELECT PARTICIPANT BIOGRAPHIES

Tom Ricketts, Owner

Tom Ricketts is the chairman and owner of the Chicago Cubs and CEO of Incapital LLC, a Chicago investment bank that packages corporate bonds for retail investors. He is also a director of TD Ameritrade Holding Corporation. In January 2009, Tom led the Ricketts family to be the winning bidder for the Chicago Cubs. The bid was estimated to be around $875 million for the team and related assets.

Laura Ricketts, Owner

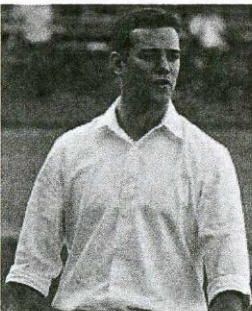

Laura Ricketts is a co-owner of the Chicago Cubs. She is also a board member of Lambda Legal (a civil rights defense fund for LGBT Americans) and the Housing Opportunities for Women organization. Ricketts is the first openly gay owner of a major-league sports franchise.

Todd Ricketts, Board of Directors

Todd Ricketts sits on the Board of Directors of the Chicago Cubs and TD Ameritrade, of which his father (Joseph Ricketts) is the founder. Ricketts attended the University of Chicago Booth School of Business and helps manage his family's political operations, serving on the board for a non-profit small government advocacy group.

Ricketts was chosen by President-elect Trump to be Deputy Secretary of Commerce on November 30.

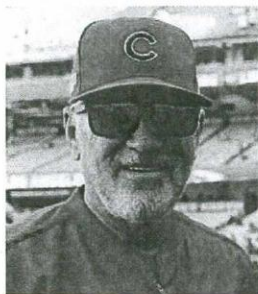

Theo Epstein, President of Baseball Operations

Theo Epstein serves as the President of Baseball Operations for the Chicago Cubs. In 2002, Epstein became the youngest general manager in the history of MLB when the Boston Red Sox hired him at the age of 28. In 2004, the Red Sox won their first World Series championship in 86 years and won another championship in 2007. On October 21, 2011 he resigned from his job in Boston to become President of Baseball Operations for the Chicago Cubs.

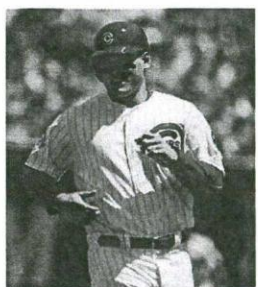

Jed Hoyer, General Manager

Jed Hoyer is the executive vice-president and general manager of the Chicago Cubs. Prior to joining the Cubs, he had been the general manager of the San Diego Padres and the assistant general manager of the Boston Red Sox.

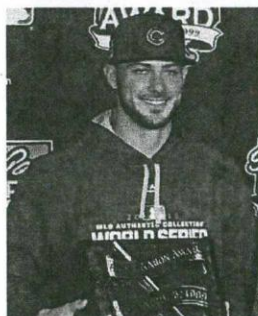

Joe Maddon, Manager

Joe Maddon is the manager of the Chicago Cubs. Maddon began his coaching career in MLB with the California Angels in 1993. He managed the Tampa Bay Rays from 2006 through 2014, winning the 2008 American League championship. After opting out of his contract following the 2014 season, he joined the Cubs, led them to the 2015 National League Championship Series and was named the 2015 National League Manager of the Year. He won his first World Series in 2016.

Anthony Rizzo, First Baseman

Anthony Rizzo is a first baseman for the Chicago Cubs. He wears #44 and will present YOU with the team gift, a jersey with the number 44. He is a three-time All-Star.

Kris Bryant, Third Baseman

Kris Bryant is a third baseman and outfielder for the Chicago Cubs. The Cubs selected him number-two overall in the 2013 MLB draft and he quickly became one of the top prospects in baseball. Bryant made his major league debut in 2015 and won the National League Rookie of the Year Award that year. He was named the National League Most Valuable Player in 2016.

José Cardenal

José Cardenal is a former outfielder for the Chicago Cubs, who was invited at the request of the First Lady. Cardenal played for nine major league clubs in a span of 18 seasons. Cardenal was a smart, aggressive baserunner with excellent speed, collecting 20 or more stolen bases in ten seasons. At the field, he showed good range and a strong throwing arm in center field.

MARTIN LUTHER KING JR. DAY SERVICE PROJECT

DATE: January 16, 2017
LOCATION: Naylor Road Program, Southeast D.C.
TIME: 2:30 – 3:25 PM
From: Pat Cunnane

I. PURPOSE

YOU and the First Lady will visit the Jobs Have Priority (JHP) Naylor Road Program (NRP), a 28-apartment family shelter in Southeast Washington, D.C., to take part in an MLK Day of Service event. YOU and the First Lady will paint an MLK mural with kids and adults who live at the program.

Of note: as a way to give back to the Washington, D.C. community, YOU donated YOUR playset from the South Lawn to NRP for the kids living at the program to enjoy. Following YOUR time painting, if the weather permits, YOU and the First Lady will greet kids playing on the playset in its new location. The pool will capture this greet as well as a spray of YOUR painting.

Background on JHP and NRP:

Jobs Have Priority's mission is to move homeless individuals from dependency to self-sufficiency by connecting homeless families with specific case managers. It works with over 500 homeless people each year, each of whom enter a JHP program and are given an assessment to determine both strengths and barriers to employment and housing. Case managers work with each individual to address and remove these barriers.

Naylor Road Program is managed by JHP. Most of the families at NRP are headed by young African-American females. The average family has two to three young children, and many have at least one family member with a mental, developmental, or physical disability. The staff at NRP know the significant impact parental employment has on family stability and the increased positive outcomes it generates for the children. This makes their work with families essential to help break the cycle of poverty and homelessness. Last year, NRP sheltered 45 families that included 66 adults and 106 children. Twenty-seven adults were placed in employment, and 17 families moved into permanent housing.

THE WHITE HOUSE

Office of the Press Secretary

For Immediate Release

January 16, 2017

REMARKS BY THE PRESIDENT
HONORING THE WORLD SERIES CHAMPION CHICAGO CUBS

East Room

1:40 P.M. EST

THE PRESIDENT: They said this day would never come. (Laughter and applause.) Here is something none of my predecessors ever got a chance to say: Welcome to the White House the World Series Champion, Chicago Cubs! (Applause.)

Now, I know you guys would prefer to stand the whole time, but sit down.

I will say to the Cubs: It took you long enough. I mean, I've only got four days left. You're just making it under the wire. (Laughter.)

Now, listen, I made a lot of promises in 2008. We've managed to fulfill a large number of them. But even I was not crazy enough to suggest that during these eight years we would see the Cubs win the World Series. But I did say that there's never been anything false about hope. (Laughter and applause.) Hope -- the audacity of hope.

PARTICIPANT: Yes, we can!

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, we can.

Now, listen, for those of you from Chicago who have known me a long time, it is no secret that there's a certain South Side team that has my loyalty. For me, the drought hasn't been as long. We had the '85 Bears; we had the the Bulls' run in the '90s. I've hosted the Blackhawks a number of times. The White Sox did win just 11 years ago with Ozzie and Konerko and Buerhle. So I can't claim that I have the same visceral joy of some in this White House. (Laughter.)

But FLOTUS is a lifelong Cubs fan. (Applause.) And I will tell you, she had to go to another event, but in eight years that I've been here -- I told the team this -- in the eight years that I've been here, we've hosted at least 50 teams -- football, basketball, baseball, soccer, you name it -- Michelle has never come to a single event celebrating a champion until today. (Applause.) And she came and shook hands, and met with every one of these members of the Cubs organization, and told a story about what it meant for her to be able to see them win, because she remembers coming home from school and her dad would be watching a Cubs game, and the bond and the family, the meaning that the Cubs had for her in terms of connecting with her father and why it meant so much for her. And I almost choked up listening to it. And it spoke, I think, to how people feel about this organization, and that it's been passed on generation after generation, and it's more than sports.

And that is not just true for FLOTUS. My longest-serving aide, Anita, is a Cubs fan. (Applause.) "Fan" is not enough. When they won, the next day she said, this is the best day of my life. ((Laughter.) And I said, what about me winning the presidency? What about your wedding day? She's like, "No, this is the best." My chief speechwriter, Cody Keenan -- (applause) -- Cubs fan. In fact, there were a lot of sick days during the playoffs. (Laughter.) One of my staff members was caught being interviewed at a bar outside of Wrigley -- (laughter) -- and we're watching him being interviewed. You remember? And he's looking kind of sheepish about it. It's like, why aren't you in the office? (Laughter.)

But, look, the truth is, there was a reason not just that people felt good about the Cubs winning. There was something about this particular Cubs team winning that people felt good about. For example, David Ross and I have something in common -- we've both been on a "year-long retirement party." (Laughter and applause.) But unlike Grandpa, my team has not yet bought me a scooter with a motorized golf caddy. But there are four days left -- maybe I'll get that.

The last time the Cubs won the World Series, Teddy Roosevelt was President. Albert Einstein -- or was it Thomas Edison was still alive. The first Cubs radio broadcast wouldn't be for almost two decades. We've been through World Wars, a Cold War, a Depression, space race, all manner of social and technological change. But during that time, those decades were also marked by Phil Cavarretta and Ernie Banks; Billy Williams, who's here today -- (applause) -- Ron Santo; Ferg, Ryne Sandberg, Dawson, Maddux, Grace. Those decades were punctuated by Lee Elia's rants and Harry Caray's exuberance; "Hey Hey," and "Holy Cow," and capped off by "Go Cubs Go."

So the first thing that made this championship so special for so many is, is that the Cubs know what it's like to be loyal, and to persevere and to hope, and to suffer, and then keep on hoping. And it's a generational thing. That's what you heard Michelle describing. People all across the city remember the first time a parent took them to Wrigley, where memories of climbing into dad's lap to watch games on WGN -- and that's part of the reason, by the way, why Michelle had invited -- made sure that José Cardenal was here, because that was her favorite player. (Applause.) And she was describing -- back then he had a big afro, and she was describing how she used to wear her hat over her afro the same way José did.

You could see all that love this season in the fans who traveled to their dads' gravesites to listen to games on the radio; who wore their moms' old jerseys to games; who covered the brick walls of Wrigley with love notes in chalk to departed fans whose lifelong faith was finally fulfilled.

None of this, of course, would have happened without the extraordinary contributions of the Ricketts family. Tom met his wife, Cece, in the bleachers of Wrigley about 30 years ago -- which is about 30 years longer than most of relationships that begin there last. (Laughter and applause.) Our dear friend Laura Ricketts met her wife, Brooke, in the ballpark, as well.

Brothers and sisters -- they turned this team around by hiring what has to be one of the greatest, if not -- I mean, he's still pretty young, so we'll see how long he keeps on going -- the greatest general managers of all time, Theo Epstein -- (applause) -- and along with Jed Hoyer and Jason McLeod. They did just an unbelievable job. Theo, as you know -- his job is to quench droughts. 86 years in Boston; 108 in Chicago. He takes the reins of an organization that's wandering in the wilderness, he delivers them to the Promised Land. I've talked to him about being DNC chair. (Laughter and applause.) But he decided wisely to stick to baseball.

That brings me to the other thing that was so special about this championship -- and that's just the guys behind me, the team. They steamrolled the majors this year with a 103-win record. All you had to know about this team was encapsulated in that one moment in Game 5, down three games to one, do or die, in front of the home fans when David Ross and Jon Lester turned to each other and said, "I love you, man." And he said, "I love you, too." It was sort of like an Obama-Biden moment. (Laughter.)

And then you've got the manager, Joe Maddon, who -- (applause) -- let's face it, there are not a lot of coaches or managers who are as cool as this guy. Look how he looks right now. (Applause.) That's cool. That's cool. He used costume parties and his "Shaggin' Wagon." (Laughter.) So he's got -- just saying -- he's got a lot of tricks to motivate. But he's also a master of tactics, and makes the right move at the right time: when to pinch hit, when to pinch run, when to make it rain -- (laughter) -- in Game 7 of the World Series. It was masterful. So he set the tone, but also some of the amazing players here set the tone.

My fellow "44" -- Anthony Rizzo, the heart of this team. (Applause.) Five years ago, he was a part of the squad that lost 101 games. He stuck at it, and led the National League in All-Star votes this year.

His business partner in the "Bryzzo Souvenir Company," which delivers baseballs to fans in all parts of the bleachers -- Kris Bryant. (Applause.) This guy had a good year. (Laughter.) You go from Rookie of the Year to being the MVP. You win the World Series. And then, like me, he marries up and comes to the White House. And he did all this just in 10 days -- (laughter) -- when it took me a long time. So, congratulations to the newlyweds, Jessica and Kris Bryant. (Applause.)

And then you got these young guys like Baez and Russell. (Applause.) Baez turning tagging into an art form. Russell becoming the youngest player to hit a World Series Grand Slam since Mickey Mantle. (Applause.) And you mix these amazing young talents with somebody like David Ross who, for example, helped Anthony out of his "glass case of emotions" in Game 7. (Applause.) But think about what Ross did in his final season: Caught a no-hitter, surpassed 100 home runs for his career, including one in his last game ever. If there was ever a way to go out, this was it.

And then you got Ben Zobrist, who didn't get to come to the White House last year after winning it all with the Royals, but then hits .357 in the World Series, go-ahead RBI in the 10th inning of Game 7, World Series MVP. I think he's earned his way here. (Applause.) And is apparently a good guy, because I asked his wife -- she was in line before he was -- and I said, has he gotten a big head since he got the whole MVP thing? "No, he's so sweet, he's so humble." You owe her dinner tonight. (Laughter.)

Extraordinary pitching staff, including Kyle Hendricks, the first Cub to lead the majors in ERA since 1938. (Applause.) Kyle, in turn, was the only pitcher this year with a better ERA than Jon Lester, who racked up 19 wins. (Applause.) Good job. Jake Arrieta, 2015 Cy Young Award winner, stretched a 20-game win streak featuring two no-hitters across the past two seasons, then hit a home run in the NLDS, and won two games in the World Series. So, apparently Pilates works. Michelle says it does. (Applause.)

And then, finally, the game itself and the Series itself. To come back from a 3-1 deficit against a great Cleveland Indians team forced what is widely considered the Game 7 of all time. Dexter Fowler becomes the first player to hit a leadoff home run in Game 7. (Applause.) Javy Baez hits another leadoff the fifth. David Ross becomes the oldest player to knock one out in a Game 7, as well. Kyle Schwarber, who's been hurt and hobbled, then suddenly he comes in and gets seven hits in the Series -- three in Game 7 alone. (Applause.)

And then you've got the 10th inning, you've got the rain. God finally feeling mercy on Cubs fans. An entire game, an entire season, an entire century of hope and heartbreak all coming down to a one-inning sprint. And then Zobrist knocked in one, Montero knocked in another. Carl Edwards, Jr. and Mike Montgomery teamed up to shut the Indians down.

And then, at 12:47 a.m. Eastern Time, Bryant -- it looks like he's going to slip; everybody is getting a little stressed -- tosses a grounder to Rizzo; Rizzo gets the ball, slips it in his back pocket -- (laughter) -- which shows excellent situational awareness. (Laughter and applause.) And suddenly everything is changed. No more black cats, billy goats, ghosts, flubbed grounders. The Chicago Cubs are the champs. And on ESPN, you've got Van Pelt saying, "one of the all-time great nights." You've got Tim Kurkjian calling it "the greatest night of baseball in the history of the game." Two days later, millions of people -- the largest gathering of Americans that I know of in Chicago. And for a moment, our hometown becomes the very definition of joy. So, in Chicago, I think it's fair to say you guys will be popular for a while. (Laughter.)

But, in addition, they're also doing a lot of good work. Anthony Rizzo and Jon Lester raised money to help others beat cancer like they did. (Applause.) Under the Ricketts Family's leadership, last year alone, Cubs Charities supported charitable grants and donations of nearly $4 million that reached nearly 120,000 children and young adults across Chicagoland. (Applause.) Under their "Let's Give" initiative, Cubs staff, coaches, players, and spouses donated more than 1,500 hours of service last year to the community. And after their visit here today, they will head to Walter Reed to visit with some of our brave wounded warriors. (Applause.)

So just to wrap up, today is, I think, our last official event -- isn't it? -- at the White House, under my presidency. And it also happens to be a day that we celebrate one of the great Americans of all time, Martin Luther King, Jr. And later, as soon as we're done here, Michelle and I are going to go over and do a service project, which is what we do every year to honor Dr. King. And it is worth remembering -- because sometimes people wonder, well why are you spending time on sports, there's other stuff going on -- that throughout our history, sports has had this power to bring us together, even when the country is divided. Sports has changed attitudes and culture in ways that seem subtle but that ultimately made us think differently about ourselves and who we were. It is a game and it is celebration, but there's a direct line between Jackie Robinson and me standing here. There's a direct line between people loving Ernie Banks, and then the city being able to come together and work together in one spirit.

I was in my hometown of Chicago on Tuesday, for my farewell address, and I said, sometimes it's not enough just to change the laws, you got to change hearts. And sports has a way, sometimes, of changing hearts in a way that politics or business doesn't. And sometimes it's just a matter of us being able to escape and relax from the difficulties of our days, but sometimes it also speaks to something better in us. And when you see this group of folks of different shades and different backgrounds, and coming from different communities and neighborhoods all across the country, and then playing as one team and playing the right way, and celebrating each other and being joyous in that, that tells us a little something about what America is and what America can be.

So it is entirely appropriate that we celebrate the Cubs today, here in this White House, on Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.'s birthday because it helps direct us in terms of what this country has been and what it can be in the future.

With that, one more time, let's congratulate the 2016 World Champion, Chicago Cubs! (Applause.)

MR. EPSTEIN: Talk about a tough act to follow. Thank you, Mr. President, and thank you for inviting us. We're all honored to be here today, and we appreciate you taking the time on such an important day, Martin Luther King Day, and during such a historic week, the last week of your distinguished presidency.

As told on my way in here, actually, by our club historian, it's actually not the first time this franchise has visited the White House. It was 1888. (Laughter.) And we were known as the "Chicago White Stockings," and we stopped in here to visit President Grover Cleveland. And apparently, the team demanded for a proclamation to be named the best baseball team in the country. The President refused, and the team went on their way. (Laughter.) Here we are, we're going to make no such demands today. (Laughter.) But we appreciate those kind words.

The President was so kind to recognize our three Hall-of-Famers here with us today who are so synonymous with what it means to be a Cub -- Billy Williams, Fergie Jenkins, Ryne Sandberg. (Applause.) And, of course, José Cardenal, who got the longest hug from the First Lady we've ever seen -- her favorite player of all time, you're the MVP today. (Laughter.)

And I want to, one more time, recognize all of the Ricketts family who are here today. Tom, who's been such an ideal leader for our organization. Laura, who's been such a strong supporter of this President. And, Todd, who will embark on his journey in public service with a significant role in the new administration next week. And, Pete, who's busy governing Nebraska, couldn't be here, but sends his best.

Finally, we'd like to recognize all of our wives and significant others who do so much to support us behind the scenes, our great "Front Office," who have worked so hard. (Applause.)

So, Mr. President, as you alluded to in Cleveland on November 2nd, and into the early morning of November 3rd, this special group of players behind me, in one of the greatest World Series games in history, ended the longest championship drought in American sports. And when Kris Bryant's throw settled into Anthony Rizzo's glove for the final out of Game 7, the victory brought pride, joy, relief and redemption to Cub fans everywhere, including many in the White House. (Applause.)

So, many of you were there, but the city of Chicago erupted, unified into celebration that continues to this day. It was a thrilling, emotional time, and we think we even saw some White Sox fans smiling -- (laughter) -- which, Mr. President, brings us to you.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes.

MR. EPSTEIN: We know you may have a certain allegiance to another team on the other side of town, but we know you're a very proud Chicagoan, and we know your better, wiser half, the First Lady -- (laughter) -- has been a life-long and very loyal Cub fan, which we appreciate very much. And, of course, we have great faith in your intelligence, your common sense, your pragmatism, your ability to recognize a good thing when you see one. (Laughter.)

So, Mr. President, with only a few days remaining in your tremendous presidency, we have taken the liberty here today of offering you a midnight pardon -- (laughter and applause) -- for all your indiscretions as a baseball fan. And so we welcome you with open arms today into the Cubs family. (Applause.)

To recognize this terrific conversion and this great day, we have some gifts for you and your family. First, Anthony Rizzo has graciously agreed to share his number 44 with "The 44." (Applause.)

THE PRESIDENT: There we go!

MR. EPSTEIN: And if you're still not comfortable putting a Cubs jersey on, this one just says Chicago, so you're good with that one. (Applause.)

Second, we have -- at historic Wrigley Field, we have a centerfield scoreboard that's actually a historic landmark, and so we hope the National Park Service won't mind, but we took down a tile for you, number 44. (Applause.) Very few people have one of those.

THE PRESIDENT: Oh, that's very cool.

MR. EPSTEIN: We also wanted you to know that, as a new fan, you have some catching up to do. (Laughter.) And you've been busy the last eight years, and your family as well, so Laura Ricketts is here to present you with a lifetime pass to Wrigley Field for you and your family. (Applause.)

THE PRESIDENT: I love how it says, "Non-transferrable." (Laughter.)

MR. EPSTEIN: It's strictly -- it's just an emolument.

THE PRESIDENT: Can you imagine if somebody walks up and is like -- (laughter) --

MS. RICKETTS: You don't have to bring it with you.

MR. EPSTEIN: And finally, every time we win a game in Chicago, we fly the "W" flag, as you know. So we brought one for you, signed by the entire team, and we'd love for you to fly it at your new library, which we plan to do our very best to support. (Applause.)

THE PRESIDENT: This is nice swag. Thank you so much. This is great.

MR. JENKINS: You got to get him to put the uniform on. (Laughter.)

MR. EPSTEIN: It's just day one. It's just day one.

THE PRESIDENT: Fergie, we're doing okay so far. (Laughter.)

MR. EPSTEIN: So, Mr. President, thank you for the dignity and integrity with which you've served this country for the last eight years, for your tremendous service to Chicago and Illinois before that, and for hosting us here today. We wish you all the best and look forward to seeing you on Wrigley Field. (Applause.)

THE PRESIDENT: Well, everybody, thank you so much. Let me say, first of all, best swag I've gotten as President represented right here. (Laughter.) And let me also say on behalf of a lot of folks here in the White House, you brought a lot of joy to a lot of people here, and we're grateful. I know my former Chief of Staff, now mayor of Chicago, Rahm Emanuel; folks like Dick Durbin, and we got a whole congressional delegation here; I see Lisa Madigan, my dear friend --- just a lot of people have been rooting for you for a long time.

So even though it will be hard for me, Fergie, to wear a jersey, do know that among Sox fans, I'm the Cubs number-one fan. (Laughter and applause.)

Happy Martin Luther King Jr Day

Pool was ushered into East Room at 12:52 where a few hundred have gathered to watch Potus fete the Chicago Cubs.

Josh Earnest and Rahm and Ari Emanuel are seated together in the front row. Valerie Jarrett is here in the front row as well and David Axelrod who came in at 1:12 wearing a "Bryant Rizzo '16 Make Chicago Great Again" t-shirt under his suit jacket. In the center of the room is a big "44" sign and the Cubs' World Series trophy. Lots of Cubs baseball caps, shirts and jackets in the audience, and a few Cubs-appareled small children.

The Cubs players filed in at 1:38 to much cheering, 33 minutes behind schedule.

Remarks to follow

Cheers of "Let's Go Cubbies!" broke out when the 2016 Cubs team walked in.

Potus walked in at 1:39

"They said this day would never come" Potus said to cheers. "This is something none of my predecessors got to say: welcome to the White House World Series champions, the Chicago Cubs"

"I made a lot of promises in 2008... but even I was not crazy enough to suggest [that Cubs would win World Series] but I did say there is nothing false about hope".

"Flouts is a life long Cubs fan. She had to go to another event but in the eight years I've been here... Michelle has never come to a single event celebrating a champion until day."

"She remembers coming home from school and her dad would be watching a Cubs game..and the meaning the Cubs had to her and connecting with her father. I almost choked up [hearing her talk about it]... It's more than about sports"

Potus joked about his staff taking lots of sick days during the 2016 playoff (and a WH staffer being caught being interviewed on TV at a bar)

"The last time the Cubs won a World Series Teddy Roosevelt was president...we've been through world wars, the Cold War, the Great Depression"

The Cubs know what it is like to be loyal, to persevere, to suffer and to hope.

Potus called Theo Epstein "one of the greatest general managers of all time"

"Theo as you know his job is to quench droughts....I've talked to him about being DNC chair" Potus jokes "but he's wisely decided to stick to baseball"

Pool gives special shout out to MVP Kris Bryant "who like me marries up" and the other "amazing young talents" of the team

Potus ran through the events of the final Series game and then "everything changed. No more black cats, billy goats, ghosts"

Noted that some of the players had stopped by Walter Reed.

"Just to wrap up today I think is our last official event at the WH under my presence and it also happens to be a day that we celebrate one of our great American heroes Martin Luther King Jr"

"In our history sports has the power to bring us together even when we're divided"

"There is a line between Jackie Robinson and me standing here"

"Sports has a way sometimes of changing hearts in a way that politics or business hasn't. Sometimes it's just a matter of us being able to escape and relax..but sometimes it's about [finding something better in us]"

Potus finished up remarks at 2:01pm

Theo Epstein presented Potus with a honorary 44 Cubs shirt (in honor of both Potus and Rizzo), a 44-tile and a lifetime pass to WrigleyField for Potus and his family).

"I love how it says non-transferable" Potus jokes about the pass.

Epstein also presented Potus with a W-flag signed by the whole team.

Potus says: "Let me just say first of all: best swag I've gotten as president"

"You've brought a lot of joy to a lot of people [in the White House]"

Potus notes that as a Socks fan it's hard for him to wear the Cubs jersey - but agrees to do it for one picture

"Go Cubs Go!" breaks out in the hall at 2:11pm

And we are rolling imminently to the next event a service project at the Jobs Have Priority Naylor Rd Family Shelter in DC, which both Obama and Flotus will be attending.

Motorcade arrived at the Shelter at 3:08pm where a crowd of onlookers was waiting for the first family.

Pool was let into the building at 3:15 where Potus and Flotus were helping half a dozen school age children paint an indoor mural featuring MLK Jr and butterflies. Potus told the pool "Happy King Day!" as we were ushered and was quick to note that he and the First Lady were not responsible for the majority of the mural which was near completion.

They painted in silence for a few moments prompting Flotus - who was in coloring in a butterfly - to remark: "We are painting in silence... Does anyone have any good jokes? Age-appropriate?" She added quickly.

Pool was ushered out quickly thereafter. We have been promised another (hopefully longer) spray towards the end of their visit.

For now, we are holding in the van where a crowd of onlookers is singing "Obama Obama Hey Hey Goodbye" (based on the Bananorama song).

A quick note from the WH on the mural that's being drawn:

"The President and the First Lady are painting a mural with the residents in the community room of the Jobs Have Priority Naylor Road Family Shelter. This is also the new home of the play-set the First Family donated from the White House grounds?."

Pool was ushered out onto "Malia and Sasha's Castle" - the playground that the Obamas donated to the shelter - for a second spray.

Eight children were playing in the playhouse and swinging on the swings when the Obamas walked onto the playground.

DC Mayor Muriel Bowser was also with them.

"Hey guys!" Obama said. "It's Barack Obama!" he said echoing one of the kids.

"How are you guys doing?" Flotus asked

Obama pushed two girls in the swing, while Flotus chatted with a few other children in the corner and then showed one small boy how to use the rope swing.

"Brings back memories" Obama remarked, while pushing the swing, noting that Sasha was not much smaller when the family moved into the White House.

Pool was escorted off the playground at 3:51. One minute later Obama came up to the edge of the playground fence to wave at the crowd gathered singing and cheering below.

Motorcade is rolling back to the White House at 3:58.

Subject: Statement by the President on the One-Year Anniversary of Implementation Day Under the Joint Comprehensive Plan of Action

THE WHITE HOUSE
Office of the Press Secretary

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

January 16, 2017

Statement by the President on the One-Year Anniversary of Implementation Day Under the Joint Comprehensive Plan of Action

Today marks the one-year anniversary of the implementation of the Joint Comprehensive Plan of Action (JCPOA) - a deal that has achieved significant, concrete results in making the United States and the world a safer place. This historic understanding reached between the United States, France, the United Kingdom, Germany, China, Russia, the European Union and Iran has rolled back the Iranian nuclear program and verifiably prevents Iran from obtaining a nuclear weapon.

One year ago, the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) verified that Iran had fulfilled key commitments spelled out under the JCPOA. Instead of steadily expanding, Iran's nuclear program faces strict limitations and is subject to the most intrusive inspection and verification program ever negotiated to monitor a nuclear program. Iran reduced its uranium stockpile by 98 percent and removed two-thirds of its centrifuges. Meanwhile, Iran has not enriched any uranium at the Fordow facility nor used advanced centrifuges to enrich. In short, Iran is upholding its commitments, demonstrating the success of diplomacy.

While this deal was intended to address Iran's nuclear program, we have remained steadfast in opposing Iran's threats against Israel and our Gulf partners and its support for violent proxies in places like Syria and Yemen. We continue to be deeply concerned about U.S. citizens unjustly imprisoned in Iran. And our sanctions on Iran for its human rights abuses, its support for terrorist groups, and its ballistic missile program will remain until Iran pursues a new path on those issues. There is no question, however, that the challenges we face with Iran would be much worse if Iran were also on the threshold of building a nuclear weapon.

The United States must remember that this agreement was the result of years of work, and represents an agreement between the world's major powers - not simply the United States and Iran. Moreover, the Iran deal must be measured against the alternatives - a diplomatic resolution that prevents Iran from obtaining a nuclear weapon is far preferable to an unconstrained Iranian nuclear program or another war in the Middle East.
