President Barack Obama
The White House
1600 Pennsylvania Avenue
Washington, D.C. 20500

Dear Mr. President:

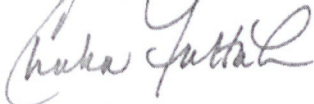

As a champion of neuroscience research, I was honored to join you last year in the East Room of the White House for the unveiling of the Brain Research through Advancing Innovative Neurotechnologies (BRAIN) Initiative. Looking around that room and seeing Dr. Francis Collins and many of the familiar faces that I've worked with through the Fattah Neuroscience Initiative and the Interagency Working Group, I saw how neuroscience had been elevated as a national priority and the opportunity that the BRAIN Initiative represents for this country. Through this initiative, we have the opportunity to leave a lasting legacy for this nation—to unlock the mysteries of the human brain and improve the quality of life for millions of Americans and countless individuals throughout the world. That legacy, however, must not be diminished or dismissed because of the cost associated with it.

In this year of action, we must be forthright in our pursuit of these goals and appropriately consider every resource at our disposal. Therefore, I respectfully ask that the $2.6 billion settlement between Credit Suisse and the Department of Justice be redirected to the National Institutes of Health for the purposes of funding the BRAIN Initiative. As you are well aware, it is a common practice for the Department of Justice to use settlement funds from corporate wrongdoing to invest in a worthy cause. Improving the livelihoods of our citizens and future generations through advancements in the diagnoses of dementia and other related diseases is a worthy cause.

As you may recall, the proposal in this letter is similar to one I made earlier this year regarding the use of the recent Toyota settlement. In that letter, I suggested that the funds from the Toyota settlement be used to benefit approximately 16 million young people through youth mentoring and character development programs. Both of these proposals stem from bi-partisan legislation I introduced with Congressman Michael Fitzpatrick this Congress, H.R. 3580 (the America's FOCUS Act). This legislation has received the overwhelming support of public interest organizations throughout the country (a complete list of which can be found here: <http://www.fattah.house.gov/americas-focus-act/>). If enacted, this legislation would direct all fines, settlements, and penalties into a special fund within the Treasury Department to invest in STEM education and youth mentoring, criminal justice reform, and innovations in medical research, including neuroscience. Collectively, these investments would benefit the lives of 124 million Americans.

While I am committed to seeing this legislation through to final passage, legislation is not needed to take advantage of the Credit Suisse settlement to fund the BRAIN Initiative. With this settlement, the United States will be poised to make the greatest investment in neuroscience the world has ever seen. As you stated in your remarks that day in the East Room, "We can't afford to miss these opportunities while the rest of the world races ahead. We have to seize them. I don't want the next job-creating discoveries to happen in China or India or Germany. I want them to happen right here, in the United States of America." I agree, and that is why I urge you to take action in redirecting these funds to the National Institutes of Health to secure the future of the BRAIN Initiative and our position as a world leader in innovation and scientific research.

Very truly yours,

United States Senate
WASHINGTON, DC 20510

May 28, 2014

The Honorable Barack Obama
President of the United States
The White House
Washington, DC 20500

Dear Mr. President:

We write regarding your selection of nominees to the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System (the Board). With its responsibilities for oversight of the financial system, it is critical that the two remaining nominees for the Board be leaders who possess expertise in financial regulation and have demonstrated a strong commitment to financial reform.

The management of the nation's monetary policy is one of the most important duties of the Board, but missteps on financial stability can overwhelm the careful work that the Federal Reserve engages in on monetary policy and bring about devastating harm to the economy. As the events of 2008 showed, when the Federal Reserve and other financial regulators failed to engage in appropriate financial regulation, the results were the worst financial crisis in 80 years, a massive bailout of the global financial system by U.S. taxpayers, and a Great Recession that left tens of millions unemployed and eliminated $19 trillion in household wealth.¹ Financial regulation and oversight obligations must be front and central to the Board's work now and going forward, which should be reflected in the new makeup of the Board.

The Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act solidified the importance of financial regulation and systemic stability for the work of the Board. Moreover, in the aftermath of this crisis, significant gaps in oversight have meant that few have been held sufficiently accountable. With additional responsibilities and oversight duties, it is now more important than ever that the membership of the Board reflect those priorities. Governor Daniel Tarullo has worked tirelessly to lead the Board's financial reform initiatives under then Chairman Ben Bernanke and now under Chairman Janet Yellen, but he cannot do it alone. Financial stability and regulatory issues are of the highest importance and should have adequate Board membership to give serious attention to those efforts.

Accordingly, we urge that the remaining openings be filled with nominees who possess the expertise and have demonstrated the commitment to address the problems revealed in the crisis and who can advance the work of the Board on financial regulation and oversight. This role could be filled by a number of qualified candidates who played important roles in investigating, analyzing, and responding in legislation and regulation to the global financial crisis and who, from past work at a regulatory agency, Congressional committee, academia or similar experience, have the vision and leadership skills to advance the crucial reforms the Federal Reserve is now in the process of implementing. A community banker with a strong commitment to a level playing field for the Main Street economy would also be a strong candidate for one of those seats. While recent nominees for other Board seats have strong macroeconomic and international experience, which are undoubtedly important, maintaining a balance of experience in the membership of the Board will help ensure that financial reform and oversight priorities are given adequate attention and continuity and will help build a bench of financial reform leaders who can carry the mantle going forward.

As more time passes since the most recent financial crisis, we must not lose our focus on the importance of financial reform for the stability and growth of our economy and the success of our working families. We appreciate your attention to this critical issue as you consider potential nominees for the Board.

Sincerely,

Jeff Merkley
United States Senator

The Honorable Barack Obama

Dear Mr. President:

Per our conversation concerning patent reform legislation, I have attached for you a diverse list of various companies, associations, and universities that have publicly announced opposition to the patent legislation that was being considered in the Senate Judiciary Committee.

As you can see from this extensive list, the legislation in its current form has strong opposition. If you believe the White House can work through this list to achieve a consensus position between those opposed and those in support then I welcome your efforts.

Sincerely,

HARRY REID
Majority Leader

United States Senate

WASHINGTON, DC 20510

June 10, 2014

President Barack Obama
The White House
1600 Pennsylvania Avenue NW
Washington DC, 20500

Dear Mr. President:

Despite a turbulent start to the federally facilitated insurance marketplace open enrollment period and the well-publicized problems with the healthcare.gov website, I was pleased that 8 million Americans, including more than 40,000 in New Hampshire, signed up to get coverage on the newly created insurance marketplaces.

I believe that the management and oversight provided by Jeffrey Zeints and then by his successor, Kurt DelBene, were essential to turning around the flawed roll out. As Kurt DelBene departs from his position, I urge your administration to appoint someone who is responsible for the operation, oversight and policy related to the federally facilitated exchange and healthcare.gov.

The creation of a position that was accountable for the day-to-day management healthcare.gov helped overcome the plagued roll out this fall. It was widely reported that after Mr. Zeints assumed his leadership role in October of 2013 response times on healthcare.gov dropped from eight seconds to less than half a second, error rates dropped from more than 6 percent to less than 0.5 percent, and the website rebounded quickly to become operational more than 99 percent of the time. The subsequent appointment of Kurt DelBene helped continue the rapid repairs of Healthcare.gov throughout the open enrollment period.

As we approach open enrollment for 2015, a great deal of work remains to improve the functionality of healthcare.gov. Appointing someone responsible for the operation and policy related to the federally facilitated exchange and healthcare.gov can help to provide sustained leadership and accountability.

Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,

Jeanne Shaheen
United States Senator
