THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April 4, 2011

MEETING WITH DANIEL YOHANNES, CEO OF THE MILLENNIUM CHALLENGE CORPORATION

DATE: April 5, 2011
LOCATION: Oval Office
TIME: TBD
From: TOM DONILON
CHRIS LU

Over the past 2 years, you have held periodic, one-on-one meetings with Cabinet members with whom you do not have a regular meeting. In an effort to expand your interaction with other agency heads, we have scheduled 15-minute meetings with several of them over the next few weeks. You will be meeting separately with Overseas Private Investment Corporation (OPIC) President and CEO Elizabeth Littlefield and Millennium Challenge Corporation (MCC) CEO Daniel Yohannes, which follow your meeting with U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID) Administrator Rajiv Shah on March 16.

I. PURPOSE

Daniel Yohannes brings a unique perspective to his role leading a key agency at the heart of U.S. efforts to reduce poverty and promote economic growth. He is an Ethiopian-American and comes to the United States Government from the private sector, where he built up expertise in finance and investment and founded one the Nation's first "green" banks. He also served as the chairman of the Greenprint Council, established by the Mayor of Denver.

The MCC is a key Administration foreign assistance agency with a focused mandate and a unique model. The MCC's mandate is to reduce poverty through economic growth in a select group of poor but well-governed countries. The MCC is committed to country-led planning and implementation, and sets high standards for transparency and managing for results. The agency's innovative approach reflects many of the best practices in foreign assistance, and it has become a model for efforts to reform development assistance and to find new ways of incentivizing key policy and institutional reforms.

In September 2010, you announced the first-ever Presidential Policy Directive on Global Development, which establishes clear priorities for the United States Government and seeks to transform our approach to advancing global development. The MCC played a critical role in helping to shape the core tenets of the policy – including its focus on economic growth, selectivity, country ownership, and results. The MCC has also been a key player in efforts to make the policy operational through the development of Partnerships for Growth with El Salvador, Tanzania, Ghana, and the Philippines. You launched the first Partnership for Growth country during your recent trip to El Salvador. The MCC expressed interest in participating in the El Salvador portion of your trip; however, due to unforeseen circumstances, it did not work out.

The MCC is also advancing a number of other presidential priorities. More than half of the MCC's investments are in agriculture and food security, part of the U.S. commitment to driving an increase in agricultural investment globally. The MCC is developing a new compact for Indonesia, with key projects focused on "green prosperity" – small-scale renewable energy and low carbon growth efforts that complement Indonesia's climate change efforts. Finally, the MCC is advancing democracy and stability in the Middle East, with significant compacts already in Jordan and Morocco, and a new effort beginning to think about how to engage Tunisia as it undergoes its democratic transition.

Your budget requests have signaled this Administration's strong support for the MCC as a critical instrument of the United States Government in advancing our objectives on global development.

BACKGROUND

The Millennium Challenge Corporation (MCC) was created by the Congress in January 2004 to deliver smart U.S. foreign assistance by focusing on good policies, country ownership, and results. The MCC forms partnerships with some of the world's poorest countries committed to good governance, economic freedom and investments in their citizens. MCC provides these well-performing countries with large-scale grants to fund country-led solutions for reducing poverty through sustainable economic growth, and it complements other U.S. and international development programs.

The MCC is managed by a Chief Executive Officer, who is part of a nine-member Board of Directors. The Secretary of State, the Secretary of the Treasury, the U.S. Trade Representative, and the U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID) Administrator serve on the board, along with four private sector representatives. In selecting developing countries to work with, the MCC's Board of Directors examines the performance of a country on 17 independent and transparent policy indicators and on policy performance. It also requires selected countries to identify their priorities for achieving sustainable economic growth and poverty reduction. It works with the countries in close partnership to help them refine a program. Once a program is decided, the MCC administers the Millennium Challenge Account (MCA), awards a compact, and looks to the country to administer their local MCA and manage and oversee all aspects of the compact implementation. The monitoring of funds is rigorous and transparent, and often requires independent fiscal agents.

The MCC has approved over $7.4 billion in compacts and threshold programs that support country-determined projects in the sectors of: agriculture and irrigation; transportation; water supply and sanitation; access to health; finance and enterprise development; anticorruption initiatives; land rights and access; and access to education. The aggressive implementation of the compact and threshold programs are promoting growth opportunities, opening markets, raising the standard of living, and creating a more prosperous future of some of the world's poorest people.

Talking Points
2012 National Launch Call with Supporters
April 5, 2011

- Thank you all for joining me today. Are you fired up? I am. Yesterday, I launched my campaign to seek a second term as President of the United States.
- It is important to me that we talk to our most important supporters, you, right at the beginning of this campaign.
- Some of you have been with us since the beginning, others joined us over the last two years as we worked so hard to move America forward, and some of you are new to this movement.
- I want to thank you all for what you've done in the past and all that you're going to do over the next year and a half.
- Because the truth is, this movement has never been about me or any one person. It's been about people at the grassroots—you all—who have worked tirelessly for a cause and a movement bigger than any single one of us.
- It's about all the people who know that despite all the problems we face, we can steer our nation to a brighter place.
- It's about all the people who have seen their lives get just a little better over the past few years.
- It's about the mom who can once again pay her bills and put food on the table because the factory in town is hiring again.
- It's about the family that can put a little bit more toward college because they got a tax break.
- It's about the dad who no longer has to worry that his insurance company will kick his child with a pre-existing condition off their coverage.
- It's about the gay soldier who can now proudly serve his country openly, without fear of retribution.
- It's about the 100,000 troops who have already come home from Iraq.
- None of this could have been possible without the energy and commitment of folks on the ground, who know that real change doesn't start in Washington—it starts when folks are coming together, community by community, neighborhood by neighborhood, house by house all around the country.

- But we also know that our work is far from over. We have more to do.
- Though the economic indicators are getting better, that's cold comfort to far too many Americans still looking for a job.
- We need to help create the conditions under which Americans are able to start small businesses easily and quickly, something that is central to our economic growth.
- We need to reform our education system so that it delivers results, preparing students for a 21st century economy where we can out-innovate and out-compete the world.
- And we need to make sure that as a government we are living within our means.
- We have farther to go, but one thing I know is that we can't go back. We must protect our progress—and that means we need to mobilize.
- Over the course of the next year and a half, we will create a grassroots organization that's more far-reaching, focused, and innovative than anything we've ever seen.
- We won't be able to do that without the help of every single one of you on the phones and doors.
- So, the campaign starts now. We need your help starting today.
- For starters, I need you to tell me "I'm in." You can go to the website, www.barackobama.com, and sign up and start spreading the word to your communities.
- I'm asking each and every one of you to volunteer your time, donate, and spread the word across the country.
- We want to spend 2011 having millions of conversations with our friends and neighbors, and I am counting on this group on the phone to help me do that.
- This is just our first conversation of many. Now I need you to say "I'm in" and start doing what you do best—mobilizing your communities. Thanks everyone for joining and with that I will be happy to take some questions.

Question #1:

Unlike 2008, there will not be a primary calendar to sustain our organizing before the general election. One thing that is critically important to us as volunteers is creating a sense of urgency to spur others into action. Can you give us some helpful tips on how to best talk to other supporters and create a sense of urgency?
