Dear Kelly:

Thank you for writing. Many Americans' lives have been affected by a wide range of health conditions and diseases, and each day I am inspired by people like you who recognize their ability to bring about positive change in the face of adversity. Your resolve reflects the fortitude of the American spirit.

Stories like yours motivate my Administration as we continue to support medical research and strive to improve the lives of all those touched by illness. I trust you take pride in the work you are doing, and I wish you all the best.

Sincerely,

[POTUS AP]

MAR 16 2015

National Alzheimer's Disease Awareness Month, 2014

By the President of the United States of America

A Proclamation

Across our Nation, as many as 5 million Americans live with Alzheimer's disease—currently an irreversible, incurable, and fatal disease. Together with their loved ones, these individuals experience the tragic realities of a disease that gradually erases cherished memories, affects behavior, and destroys the ability to live independently and carry out the simplest daily tasks. This month, we recognize all those whose lives have been touched by Alzheimer's, and we renew our commitment to making progress in the war against it.

The Federal Government is the world's leading funder of Alzheimer's research, and we are dedicated to finding ways to prevent and effectively treat this devastating disease by 2025. Guided by the National Plan to Address Alzheimer's Disease, my Administration is working to enhance care for Alzheimer's patients, expand support for all people with dementia, and strengthen public-private partnerships to support the Alzheimer's community. We have funded major new clinical trials, helped train health care providers to diagnosis and manage dementia, and launched a new website that serves as a one-stop resource on Alzheimer's issues. And this year, as part of our Brain Research through Advancing Innovative Neurotechnologies (BRAIN) Initiative, we announced new investments to support the research that could unlock the answers to this disease. To learn more about Alzheimer's disease—including risk factors and early signs and symptoms—and to access resources for patients and caregivers, Americans can visit www.Alzheimers.gov.

During National Alzheimer's Disease Awareness Month, we join with researchers, health care providers, and patient advocates across our country to lift up all those who are battling this disease every day. As we come together to raise awareness about Alzheimer's, we honor the individuals who lost their lives to it, as well as the devotion and selflessness of the millions of caregivers who endure the financial and emotional strains of this disease. In their spirit, let us continue our work to end this debilitating ailment and its devastating effects.

NOW, THEREFORE, I, BARACK OBAMA, President of the United States of America, by virtue of the authority vested in me by the Constitution and the laws of the United States, do hereby proclaim November 2014 as National Alzheimer's Disease Awareness Month. I call upon the people of the United States to learn more about Alzheimer's disease and support the individuals living with this disease and their caregivers.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand this thirty-first day of October, in the year of our Lord two thousand fourteen, and of the Independence of the United States of America the two hundred and thirty-ninth.

Message:

I have been so proud of you, thank you for what you have been able to do for this country. You have done an excellent job considering what the republicans have, or more importantly, have not dealt you. But I wanted to take a moment to tell you how much I appreciate what you have done for me. That was to raise the initiative to increase the knowledge and the care that has been generated for those of us who have been diagnosed with Alzheimer's. As a retired nurse myself, I never truly understood Alzheimer's and the way it can invade an individuals life and those around them.

[REDACTED] who I feel are doing the best so that people in the next several generations don't have to deal with this mind robbing disease.

with that. At least you have made it [REDACTED] others and for the future, to remove the shadows and to bring in those people willing to work on a cure. Because there is a cure, and it is not a shadow that one needs to carry any longer. If we can just take good care of those of us that still suffer, and bring this disease to an end. That is very honorable of you to do. Thank you always. Sincerely, Kelly D. Fritz

You will always be proud of the job you did in the White House. More importantly, for the people in/of this land.
