Subject: Local pool 3

P6/b(6)

As the president's foursome moved up the ninth fairway at Mink Meadows, a crowd of about 40 people gathered on the porch of the pro shop. The president's approach shot rolled about 15 yards short of the ninth green, and about 40 yards short of the flag. He walked into the woods to the right of the fairway for a short time, apparently searching for a ball hit there by another member of the foursome. The president drove his golf cart to the green, and waved to the crowd just before setting over his chip shot. With a smooth stroke, he landed the chip shot about six feet to the right of the pin. The crowd oohed, aahhed, and applauded warmly. The president walked onto the green, and pool reporters were instructed to load back into press vans, out of view of the foursome as they finished the round.
